I am wondering what, from the point of view of the Catholic Church, is the goal of dialogue with atheists. "Orthodox" Catholics consider themselves not only to know that God exists. They also consider themselves to have an infallible source of certain truths that they claim cannot possibly be mistaken.

Choice Theory, developed by William Glasser, MD., provides an explanation of motivation which is markedly different from what many of us have been taught. A central aspect of Choice Theory is the belief that we are internally, not externally motivated. While other theories suggest that outside events "cause" us to behave in certain predictable ways, Choice Theory teaches that outside events ...

What if you could choose one person in your life and end their suffering? All the pain and frustration and woe intrinsic to their mortal condition would disappear and—best of all—with no financial investment, effort, or trouble on your part. All that is required from you is to abstain from an activity with no compelling justification. Would any reasonable person neglect such an opportunity?

Introduction. The connection between language and thought is profound. The majority of our everyday life involves the use of language. We tell our ideas to others with language, we "read" their responses and understand their meanings with language, and very often, we "speak" internally to ourselves when we process this information and make logical conclusions.
