Titration, also known as titrimetry, is a common laboratory method of quantitative chemical analysis that is used to determine the concentration of an identified analyte. Since volume measurements play a key role in titration, it is also known as volumetric analysis. A reagent, called the titrant or titrator is prepared as a standard solution. A titrant sample of known concentration and volume ...

Although acid-base titrations are carried out in the liquid phase, one or more steps usually involves weighing a solid reagent on a balance. Sodium hydroxide, for example, is standardized by titrating potassium hydrogen phthalate (KHP) that is weighed on an analytical (0.0001 gram) balance.
